Milken Educator Awards

The future belongs to the educated
To receive the Award in the presence of my students and staff was doubly rewarding because they are an integral part of my development as an educator. I hope to inspire some of those students to become educators in the future.”

OMAR DURON
2019 Arizona Milken Educator
A Message From Lowell Milken

Education is at the heart of nearly everything we value as individuals, as citizens and as productive human beings. This philosophy and its implementation has been the driving force in our initiatives at the Milken Family Foundation since 1982. Essential to this pursuit are the development and support of an effective and respected teaching profession.

As a nation, we depend on our teachers and principals to produce students and graduates who are not only literate, numerate and conversant in the humanities and sciences, but who are also creative, motivated and confident. As a society, we seek to nurture young people who are able and willing to think independently and act with integrity, confidence and compassion.

Education’s role as the most important of all professions is a message that the public should hear and understand. It is also a message that our educators need to hear as they strive to maintain high expectations, provide quality instruction and offer emotional support regardless of the challenges.

The talented educators who teach and prepare students to meet these demands are doing nothing less than laying the foundation for our national security. For whether a school is urban, suburban or rural—whether it represents the most affluent or those most in need—within the course of a school day, research confirms that nothing has more impact on student learning than the effectiveness of the teacher in the classroom.

In creating the Milken Educator Awards, my goal was to bring to the fore those educators who epitomize achievement, but who also have the potential to make even more profound contributions moving forward. Since presenting our first Awards to one dozen exemplary California educators in 1987, we have seen how focusing the spotlight of recognition on such excellence inspires not only educators, but also students and entire communities to new heights of commitment and expectation.

With each new class of Milken Educators, we are reminded that the power and promise of education must be replenished from generation to generation if we are to sustain our course as a democracy with opportunities for all. In a complex and changing world, the watchwords of the Milken Educator Awards ring true:

The future belongs to the educated!

I teach because education is what gave me the opportunity to reach all of my dreams. I teach because I believe it gives people the opportunity to build the life that they want for themselves. It was given to me, and I can give it to others.”

The Milken Educator Awards
Touching Minds And Hearts

Since 1987, more than two million students have experienced that special day when an educator was surprised with a $25,000 Award, hailed as a celebrity, and showered with attention from students, colleagues, VIPs, media and the community.

Unlike most teacher recognition programs, the Milken Educator Awards have no formal nomination or application process. Candidates are sourced through a confidential selection process and then reviewed by blue ribbon panels appointed by state departments of education. Those most exceptional are recommended for the Award, with final approval by the Milken Family Foundation.

The surprise announcements are made before cheering students, respected colleagues, distinguished officials, the media—and a stunned new Milken Educator. In a moment’s time, these unsung heroes gain a significant, unrestricted financial prize of $25,000 and experience the unfamiliar but well-deserved acclaim and acknowledgment they rightly merit.

Media multiplies the message of the pivotal role that talented educators play in student achievement. News stories across all forms of media herald the inspiration and contributions of these newly discovered role models in education. These stories catch the attention of communities young and old, voters and policymakers alike.

“...In D.C., we know how fundamentally important our educators are when it comes to changing the trajectory of a child’s life, and we take every opportunity to honor our outstanding educators for the amazing and lifelong impact they have on thousands of students, teachers and families throughout their careers. The Milken Award helps shine a light on exemplary educators who go above and beyond to help each individual student succeed, mentor new teachers and serve as leaders in their school communities.”

Helping Teachers and Students Reach Their Potential

"Milken Educators point to their Award as a pivotal professional milestone. They understand that encompassed in this recognition is the responsibility to grow as a leader at and beyond the school level. Encouraged and supported, these outstanding educators discover a renewed passion and purpose as they stretch their professional practices and policy influence to ever-higher levels.

As a 1994 recipient from Indiana, I know firsthand the value I placed on colleagues I met first in my Indiana network and then across the country. To this day, these interactions continue to recharge my batteries and remind me of the importance of our work and why we chose to be educators: to be the catalyst and guide that helps all students reach their potential."

DR. JANE FOLEY

Senior Vice President, Milken Educator Awards
OUTSTANDING educators who continue to learn are essential to the fostering of student growth, the improvement of schools and the enhancement of the education profession. Hence, the goals of the Milken Educator Awards are to:

- Honor and reward outstanding K–12 educators for the quality of their teaching, their professional leadership, their engagement with families and the community and their potential for even greater contributions to the healthy development of children. These educators represent the top 1% of the teaching profession and provide a lifetime incentive for the individuals to stay in the profession.

- Focus public attention on the good news and results in education.

- By spotlighting the importance of exceptional educators, encourage talented people to enter the teaching profession.

“As educators, we shape the world. In order to do so, we must continuously be lifelong learners ourselves. Those who are educated will have the unique ability to continue to break down barriers, find cures, achieve great success in their profession and ultimately impact the lives of those around them. Education is truly power.”

”I was quite young, having just started my seventh year of teaching, when I received this awesome, unexpected and life-changing Award. My first response was, ‘They must think I’m doing something really great, so I’d better get started.’

I used the Award money to earn my master’s degree, which launched my career into administration. Many doors opened because of my association with the Milken Family Foundation, and I have had an amazing journey.”

🌟 Exceptional educational talent as evidenced by effective and innovative instructional practices and student learning results in the classroom and school.

🌟 Exemplary educational accomplishments and leadership beyond the classroom that provide models of excellence for the profession.

National Milken Educator Forum

A professional highlight of receiving the Milken Educator Award is joining forces to bring the mission of “Celebrate, Elevate, Activate” into action. The newest class meets and becomes inspired by fellow Award recipients, as well as “veteran” Milken Educators whose accomplishments continue to impress. Recipients share experiences, techniques and accomplishments while developing bonds that last a lifetime.

During sessions with national education leaders, Milken Educators learn how to cultivate their impact beyond the classroom and to advance educational excellence at state and national levels. Most importantly, the Forum helps Milken Educators articulate their passions and develop their “voice” into roles that lead to real change.

Milken Educator Network

Cultivating Effective Leadership and Education Reform

The Milken Educator Award’s visibility and reputation results in unlimited opportunities for educators to improve education from local to international levels. New recipients join the Milken Educator Network, a group of more than 2,900 distinguished professionals whose expertise serves as a valuable resource to fellow educators, legislators, school boards and others shaping the future of education.

The Milken Educator Network fosters effective leadership and education reform through its state and national engagement. Network meetings, discussion forums, national gatherings, webinars and other experiences promote collegiality and enhance communication among education stakeholders. During the COVID pandemic and currently, this Network serves as an invaluable link as Milken Educators across America come together for professional development and moral support with dozens of Zoominars as well as one-on-one mentoring. The robust MEA Connections blog explores obstacles and opportunities both professional and personal. Educators continue to transform challenges into opportunities for the future.
"While the Award money is indeed a benefit, the lasting thing is the public recognition, the validation of excellence and the opportunity to join a national network."

Across the country, Milken Educators …

CELEBRATE

Hawaii Milken Educators

Aloha State Award recipients from years past travel from the neighboring islands to take part in the surprise notifications. Their collective support sheds light on the professional possibilities awaiting the newest members of the Milken Educator family. A special highlight is an annual event to honor the new recipient and present mini-grants to early-career teachers. In 2021, the Hawaii Milken Educators formed their own 501(c)(3) to expand their activities and influence, under the banner of the Hawaii Foundation for Educational Excellence.
Virginia Teachers of Promise

Inspired by the Milken Educator Awards, the Teachers of Promise Institute was launched in 2004 by a team of Milken Educators from across Virginia. The Institute (www.teachersofpromise.com) honors future teachers from dozens of college and university schools of education through a two-day experience that celebrates the decision to teach, elevates the teaching profession and activates a network of excellence in classrooms and schools. Wade Whitehead (VA ’00) serves as executive director, with Stephanie Bishop (VA ’01) and Laura Marshall (VA ’08) serving as co-directors.

To date, over 3,700 future teachers have been recognized as Teachers of Promise. These alumni include State Teachers of the Year, National Board Certified Teachers, and Milken Educator Ryan Sykes (VA ’19). More than 100 master educators from across the nation, including over 50 Milken Educators, have served as mentors and presenters. The Institute is funded by the Teachers of Promise Foundation, a 501(c)(3) established by Wade in 2010. The Foundation has raised more than $1,000,000 to support the Institute.

“We are identifying and honoring the next generation of great teachers and are working to advance their understanding of what teaching and learning really are. Truly they are our last, best hope for navigating the astounding potential hidden in our schools.”

Milken Educators know instantly that the Award is an honor. It is also a responsibility with opportunities and expectations to grow as a leader in the profession. Recipients are challenged to be teacher leaders—role models who use their example, voice and influence in schools and diverse settings far beyond their campus. But they are not left on their own to meet these expectations.

Freshmen and veteran Milken Educators are invited to participate in a one-of-a-kind partnership between the two called Milken Friends Forever (MFF). Through focused communication, along with personalized support and coaching, veteran Milken Educators assist their MFFs in determining how, when and where they will “Elevate” to improve their own instructional and/or professional practices and “Activate” to explore, prepare and serve in leadership roles that influence practice and policy of others.

New and veteran Milken Educators become thought partners with common qualities of passion, excellence and drive. They connect through monthly calls, webinars and Zoom meetings to determine priorities, set goals, outline strategies and set timelines. Deep professional relationships provide an atmosphere of trust to discuss professional activities, offer feedback, share areas of expertise, and build bridges among their nationally recognized colleagues within the vast Milken Educator Network.

What has transpired is that Milken Educators are growing and leading at an exponential rate. By impacting teachers and students across our nation, they strengthen the legacy of our motto: "The future belongs to the educated."

Instead of the typical mentor-mentee model that assumes the mentor is the sage, Milken Friends Forever recognizes the rewards the veteran Milken Educator receives from being paired with a new Milken Educator. It is such a gift to have relationships with other incredible educators across the country ... especially when we have opportunities to reimagine education together.”

Activating Milken Educators (AME)

Individually, Milken Educators are exemplary. Activating Milken Educators (AME) intends to capitalize on the force of what Milken Educators can accomplish collectively.

AME promotes collaboration among Milken Educators to target topics intended to attract, retain, motivate and develop teacher effectiveness in their states, by designing programs and solutions aligned to “Celebrate, Elevate, Activate.”

Six Milken Educator Networks—Alabama, Florida, Missouri, Nebraska, North Carolina and West Virginia—were involved in phase one of planning statewide projects for AME. Network planning meetings focus on developing a strong purpose for projects shaped to the needs of states. Projects have relevance collectively for the Network and individually to Milken Educators. Phase two includes the continuation and expansion of projects in phase one states and the addition of eight Milken Educator Networks—Arizona, Delaware, Michigan, New Jersey, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania and South Carolina. The goal is to take AME to Milken Educators across America.
I vividly remember Lowell Milken at my notification telling me that he expected great things from me. I recall him saying that this Award was being given for what I was going to do to make a positive difference in education. I took that to heart! I will remember that day forever because I suddenly had an entire ‘family’ who believed that I had the ability to make a difference. That is extremely powerful.”

While no two American Dream stories are the same, many have common themes: overcoming adversity, uprooting from your home, generational sacrifice, grit in the face of hardship, resilience, a lucky break, help at the moment it was needed, an inspirational teacher or mentor, access to education that opened up new perspectives and opportunities, and sometimes, an innovative idea destined to change the way we live. And these dreams rely on the ideals underpinning the founding of America: that all people are created equal, that we should govern ourselves through democracy, that everyone is equal in the eyes of the law, and that the circumstances of our birth should not limit our aspirations in life.”

MCAAD HIGHLIGHTS MILKEN EDUCATORS FOR THEIR CONTRIBUTIONS TO REALIZING HUMAN POTENTIAL

Education and The Educator

MCAAD is built on four pillars, the strength of which propels realization of the American Dream for individuals, communities and nations. The pillar Education and the Educator is epitomized by Milken Educators, indeed every educator who inspires and instills the knowledge, skills, talents and perseverance to overcome challenges and become productive citizens. Universal access to high-quality, relevant education may be the most fundamental element of keeping the American Dream alive for millions across the world.

MCAAD’s K-12 programming thus focuses on keys to securing the American Dream: financial literacy and access to capital, health, and building an entrepreneurial spirit. Led by Kirk Brown (CA ‘99), MCAAD’s K-12 team—with input from Educator Fellows—are developing an “American Dream toolkit” of resources, teaching materials and guidelines designed to instill drive and curiosity in learners everywhere.

In summer 2022, the Center held its inaugural meeting of Educator Fellows in Washington, D.C. Several were Milken Educators, including Dr. Jane Foley (IN ’94), Stephanie Bishop (VA ’01), Maria DeBruin (NJ ’17), Ryan James (VA ’17), Roger Kassebaum (NE ’97), John Lary (LA ’15), Dr. Johnnie Marshall (GA ’19), Silvia Miranda (NM ’18), Ben Nguyen (NV ’19), Brian Page (OH ’11) and Dr. Dilhani Uswatte (AL ’09). Together, they are creating plans to build a robust educator community worldwide that will equip and inspire generations of students.

“I joined the Milken Center for Advancing the American Dream because I believe that everyone should have the tools and inspiration to be prepared to reach for their dreams. My grandparents and great-grandparents ran for land in Oklahoma in covered wagons to build a better life for their families. Having spent 35 years in education, I have witnessed the power of inspiration coupled with the tools to succeed. I am proud to help in these efforts for all people!”

Real heroes tower and guide. They are the North Star that today’s youth can look up to. But their stories need to be discovered and heard. And when we do, we have the opportunity to motivate new generations to aspire to values that are essential during the challenging times we face individually, as a nation and as a world community.

That is the purpose of the Center for Unsung Heroes.”

Unsung Hero (n):
One who created positive change in history by improving the lives of others, and has yet to be recognized for his or her actions.

The Lowell Milken Center for Unsung Heroes (LMC) transforms classrooms and communities through student-driven projects that discover Unsung Heroes from history—individuals who changed the world through their courage and compassion, yet are not found in history books. Established in 2007 as a partnership between Lowell Milken and 1992 Kansas Milken Educator and history teacher Norm Conard, LMC’s unique project-based learning approach integrates research, critical thinking and creativity for students and educators across diverse cultures and academic disciplines.

LMC has reached over three million students worldwide via its online projects, educator resources and student competitions. The Fort Scott, Kansas, headquarters has welcomed visitors from all 50 states and from countries around the world. The Hall of Unsung Heroes museum was added in 2016, featuring an inspirational, high-tech space with interactive exhibits and expanded research opportunities. In 2022, LMC celebrated the grand opening of its Unsung Heroes Park, a vibrant community gathering space for programs and activities. LMC is an initiative of the Lowell Milken Family Foundation.

CHILDREN’S BOOK SERIES

Inspiring children and adults alike with uplifting stories of Unsung Heroes

It’s never too early for elementary school students to gain an appreciation of history and character. The LMC Unsung Heroes Children’s Book Series by award-winning educator Cathy Werling does just that with stories like these:

- A teenage Ken Reinhardt stood up against racism during the 1957 integration of Little Rock Central High School.
- Sergeant Stubby, a stray dog, captured the heart of a soldier and went on to save countless lives during World War I.
- Andrew Jackson Higgins never gave up on developing the boats that delivered troops to France on D-Day and helped to end World War II.
- Irena Sendler, a Catholic social worker who rescued hundreds of Jewish children from the Warsaw Ghetto during World War II and was the catalyst for LMC’s creation.

Their actions provide important examples for children as young students discover their own power and responsibility to effect positive change in the world. Each compelling story is complemented by colorful illustrations.

Books are available on the LMC website and major online booksellers.

“I love the story and the colorful illustrations in this beautiful book about Irena Sendler! Every young girl should read this story of a woman who risked her life to save 2,500 children during the Holocaust. It may inspire young girls everywhere to believe in ‘the power of one’ to change the world.”

AMAZON REVIEW

“Truly, boys and girls need to know that to succeed in life, all you need is an idea and an ‘I can do this’ attitude. Thank you for wanting to bring this positive message to today’s next generation.”

The Milken Scholars Program was founded in 1989 by Lori and Michael Milken to honor exceptional young individuals based on scholarship, leadership, service, character and triumphs over obstacles. Scholars are graduating high school seniors from New York, Washington, D.C., and Los Angeles County who go through a rigorous nomination and interview process.

Each receives a $10,000 scholarship, but what makes the program unique is the access to a lifetime of resources, including mentorship throughout their college careers and beyond. The three-day Summit, with presentations by outstanding leaders from diverse fields, allows Scholars to form and renew friendships as they exchange ideas and aspirations. Milken Scholars is a joint initiative of the Milken Family Foundation and the Milken Institute.

“The Milken Scholars Program has supported me not just during my most formative years as an undergraduate student, but also every year since. It has provided a community that I can consistently and perpetually turn to for support during the worst of failures, celebrate with during the pinnacles of success, and bond with during every occasion and milestone in between. The Scholars Program has been an integral part of my life as I continue to make meaningful connections across a group of 542 (and counting) driven individuals who have overcome profound challenges with the goal of achieving our ambitions and individual callings in life, all the while helping and supporting each other and those around us.
